The Project

The purpose of this project is to facilitate an 'exchange of good practice' which will aim to develop a Bootcamp programme for students where they will be able to learn entrepreneurship and critical thinking skills in conjunction with English language learning.

Learning entrepreneurial and critical thinking skills is not only an additional incentive when taking an English language course, but it is also a necessity. Necessity to the extent that people who learn another language, usually learn it in order to develop their competencies professionally. An advanced vocabulary and competency skill expansion are particularly important and can increase employment as well as increase career opportunities nationally and internationally.

As part of this project five transnational meetings (TPM) which will include 2-3 participants from each organisation, one teacher training with the same amount of participants as well as one learning mobility/Bootcamp for students with around 15-20 participants will be held. TPM's are the key instruments for project coordination and management. The mobilities play a fundamental role in the achievement of the project goals and objectives.

In respect to long term benefits, we hope this project will prove the necessity to develop other skill based programmes in conjunction with language learning across adult education institutions. It will open an opportunity to develop further projects with an intellectual output giving greater possibilities for adult organisations to provide courses with approved educational programmes.
